Subject: Re: Land acknowledgment statement in your course syllabus

Dear Stuart,

Because the current text under “Indigenous Land Acknowledgement” in your CSE143 syllabus is causing a disruption to instruction in your class and because it is not related to the course content, it needs to be removed. Since you are not willing to make the change yourself, I have removed that section from the syllabus. I have also asked our IT team to update the syllabus on your course website.

It goes without saying that you have the right to have discussions about land acknowledgements, but we ask that you please take those discussions outside of your classroom.

I'm going to email your class to explain the change. In that email, I will reassure the students that everyone in your class should expect to be treated fairly, as this is a concern that students have raised. I will also provide links to standard resources in case a student wants to raise any additional concerns.

Regards,
Magda

Dear Stuart,

The statements you used are offensive and students have raised complaints. I ask you to please update your syllabus. Until then, I have asked our IT staff to take the syllabus down. I request that you do not post the original version of your syllabus in any form.

Separately, if you would like to bring up your concerns about land acknowledgments with the UW, I'm sure we can help you find the right people to talk to.

thanks,
magda

That expresses a particular political viewpoint. If you're going to allow people to include that, then you need to allow me to include mine. So I'll say again that if you tell all winter instructors that they must remove any land acknowledgment, then I will comply.
